

Targeted Killings

Law and Morality in an Asymmetrical World

Edited by Claire Finkelstein, Algernon Biddle Professor of Law and Professor of Philosophy, University of Pennsylvania; Co-Director, Penn Institute for Law and Philosophy, Jens David Ohlin, Associate Professor of Law, Cornell Law School and Andrew Altman, Georgia State University; Director of Research for the Jean Beer Blumenfeld Center for Ethics

- Innovative analysis of one of the most controversial topics in international law and moral theory, and one that is of significant military and political importance in the context of the war on terror
- Interdisciplinary approach allows readers in both law and philosophy to see the connections between the legal and moral arguments about targeted killing

The war on terror is remaking conventional warfare. The protracted battle against non-state organizations, the demise of the confinement of hostilities to an identifiable battlefield, the extensive involvement of civilian combatants, and the development of new and more precise military technologies have all conspired to require a rethinking of the law and morality of war. Just war theory, as traditionally articulated, seems ill-suited to justify many of the practices of the war on terror. The raid against Osama Bin Laden's Pakistani compound was the highest profile example of this strategy, but the issues raised by this technique cast a far broader net: every week the U.S. military and CIA launch remotely piloted drones to track suspected terrorists in hopes of launching a missile strike against them. With each passing year, the U.S. government increases the frequency and scope of these attacks. Moreover, other states, including Israel and Russia, have engaged in the targeted killing of terrorist suspects. This book addresses the legal and moral implications of this practice.

The Law of Targeting

William H. Boothby, Former Deputy Director of Legal Services for the Royal Air Force and Michael N. Schmitt, Chairman, International Law Department, United States Naval War College

- Detailed, practical, and accessible, this is the definitive work on the controversial topic of targeting in warfare
- Highly contemporary account analysing new attack methods, including drone attacks and the complex issues surrounding cyber warfare
- With both a doctrinal and practical perspective, this book will be invaluable to government and army legal advisers as well as to scholars and students in the area

Comprehensively examining all aspects of the law of targeting in military operations, the book assesses controversies in the rules governing targeting, including the use of human shields, the level of care required in a bombing campaign, and in the determination of whether someone is directly participating in hostilities.

Extraterritorial Use of Force Against Non-State Actors

Noam Lubell, Lecturer, Irish Centre for Human Rights, National University of Ireland, Galway

- First book to bring together all the different areas of law applicable to the extraterritorial use of force against non-state actors, including international humanitarian law, human rights law, UN law and the use of force
- Clear and systematic examination of the complex legal issues involved
- Includes analysis of anticipatory self-defence, the classification of the 'war on terror' as an armed conflict, the extraterritorial application of human rights law, and the targeting killing of individuals

This book examines the legality of the use of force by states against individuals and non-state groups located beyond its borders, in light of applicable international law. The issues discussed include force used in the 'war on terror', pre-emptive self-defence, and targeted killings of individuals.

The Changing Character of War

Edited by Hew Strachan, Chichele Professor of the History of War and Fellow of All Souls College, Oxford; Director of the Oxford Programme on the Changing Character of War, and Sibylle Scheipers, Lecturer in International Relations, University of St Andrews and Senior Research Associate, Changing Character of War Programme, Oxford University

The Changing Character of War unites scholars from the disciplines of history, politics, law, and philosophy to ask in what ways the character of war today has changed from war in the past, and how the wars of today differ from each other. It discusses who fights, why they fight, and how they fight.

The Philosophical Foundations of Extraterritorial Punishment

Alejandro Chehtman, Research Associate, Centre for International Courts and Tribunals, University College London

- Highly original work on the philosophy behind one of the most important issues in contemporary criminal law
- Globalization, transnational crime, and terrorism mean that extraterritorial punishment will become increasingly common
- Interdisciplinary approach encompasses analysis of the relevant case law, political theory, and the philosophy of law

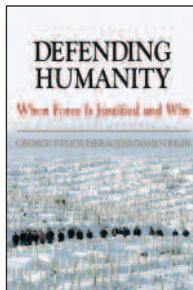

The principle of extraterritorial punishment, which enables national courts to exert jurisdiction over crimes committed abroad by nationals of other states, has become increasingly accepted. This book provides a normative account and critique of this form of jurisdiction, exploring its links to globalization, transnational crime, and terrorism.

Defending Humanity
When Force is Justified and Why

George P. Fletcher, Cardozo Professor of Jurisprudence, Columbia Law School, and Jens David Ohlin, Associate Professor of Law, Cornell Law School

This provocative book offers a ground-breaking theory on the legality of war, providing clear guidelines for evaluating forceful interventions. The authors suggest going back to the domestic criminal law concepts upon which the U.N. Charter was originally based—in particular, the concept of ‘legitimate defense,’—which encompasses not only self-defense but defense of others. The book explains how the concept of legitimate defense will enable political leaders, courts, and scholars to see the solid basis under international law for states to intervene with force—not just to protect themselves but also to defend other nations.

Reimagining Child Soldiers in International Law and Policy

Mark Drumbl, Class of 1975 Alumni Professor of Law; Director, Transnational Law Institute, Washington and Lee University

- Challenges all of the perceived wisdom about child soldiers and argues that these children aren't always innocent victims
- Proposes that, rather than being lumped together in a homogenous group, child soldiers should be judged on the basis of their actions and should, in some cases, take responsibility for their crimes through traditional justice mechanisms
- Provides a comprehensive overview of child soldiering all over the world, drawing on legal, anthropological, and ethnographic research

Conversations about child soldiers mostly involve the same story, told over and over, and repeat the same assumptions. Current humanitarian discourse sees child soldiers as passive victims, tools of war, vulnerable, psychologically devastated, and not responsible for their violent acts. This perception has come to suffuse international law and policy. Although reflecting much of the lives of child soldiers, this portrayal also omits critical aspects. This book pursues an alternate path by reimagining the child soldier. It approaches child soldiers with a more nuanced and less judgmental mind. It also offers fresh thinking on related issues, ranging from juvenile justice, to humanitarian interventions, to the universality of human rights, to the role of law in responding to mass atrocity.

The Moral and Legal Status of Soldiers

Edited by David Rodin, Senior Research Fellow and Co-Director of the Institute for Ethics, Law and Armed Conflict at the University of Oxford and Senior Fellow at the Carnegie Council for Ethics in International Affairs in New York, and Henry Shue, Professor Emeritus of International Relations and Senior Research Fellow, Centre for International Studies, University of Oxford

Can a soldier be held responsible for fighting in a war that is illegal or unjust? The chapters in the book both challenge and defend many deeply held assumptions: about the liability of soldiers for crimes of aggression, about the nature and justifiability of terrorism, about the relationship between law and morality.

The Nuremberg Military Tribunals and the Origins of International Criminal Law

Kevin Jon Heller, Senior Lecturer, Melbourne Law School

'Kevin Jon Heller is a first-rate legal analyst, a fine historian, an expert on international criminal law, and a lucid writer. This timely book will interest anyone who cares about the law's effort to confront radical evil. Those interested in professional and business ethics should find it equally absorbing. It fills a major gap in our historical understanding, and explores doctrines at the cutting edge of today's international tribunals.'

David Luban, University Professor in Law and Philosophy, Georgetown University Law Center

- First book to provide a comprehensive and structured overview of all twelve trials of the Nuremberg Military Tribunals
- Important analysis of how the jurisprudence of these Tribunals has shaped the development of international criminal law and how it remains relevant today
- Based on extensive archival research, citing many little-known records and transcripts

Less famous than the Nuremberg International Military Tribunal but no less important, the Nuremberg Military Tribunals tried lower-level functionaries and private citizens for their parts in WW II. This book gives a full overview of these trials and it traces the critical role they have played in the development of international criminal law.

The Law of Non-International Armed Conflict

Sandesh S. Sivakumaran, Lecturer, School of Law, University of Nottingham

Non-international armed conflicts now far outnumber international ones, but the protection afforded by international law to combatants and civilian is not always clear. This book will set out the legal rules and state practice applicable to internal armed conflicts, drawing on armed conflicts from the US civil war to present day.

- Makes sense of the rules and principles applicable to non-international armed conflict, the world's most prevalent and deadly type of war
- Provides new insights on the law of non-international armed conflict, drawing on the views and practice of both governments and irregular armed forces
- Identifies and synthesizes the relevant rules from international humanitarian law, international human rights law, and international criminal law
- Takes a historical view: analyses armed conflicts from the US civil war, the Algerian War of Independence, and the attempted secession of Biafra, through to the current conflicts in Colombia, the Philippines, and Sudan

Rwanda's Gacaca Courts

Between Retribution and Reparation

Paul Christoph Bornkamm, Senior Research Fellow, Law Faculty of Humboldt University of Berlin

- A fresh critique of Rwanda's Gacaca courts, drawing on extensive observations of the trial proceedings and empirical research
- Provides a full analysis of the workings of the Gacaca courts, evaluating their merits as well as the criticisms levelled at them
- Critically examines the contribution the courts have made to reconciliation in Rwanda and their effectiveness as a tool of transitional justice

The Gacaca courts are a traditional justice mechanism used by the Rwandan government to try lower-level perpetrators of the 1994 genocide. This book provides an empirical analysis of these courts, assessing their rules and procedures as well as their contribution to reconciliation in Rwanda.

The Handbook of the International Law of Military Operations

Edited by Terry Gill,

Professor of Military Law,

University of Amsterdam

& Netherlands Defence Academy; Associate Professor

Public International Law, Utrecht University, and

Dieter Fleck, formerly Director, International

Agreements and Policy, Federal Ministry of Defence,

Bonn; Honorary President, International Society for

Military Law and the Law of War

The past decades have seen a remarkable development of military operations both within the United Nations collective security system and in other international settings. While traditional forms of military operations have been maintained and further developed, there have also been substantive developments, responding to new challenges for international security, the specific requirements of international and multinational cooperation, and legal regulation.

Based on best-practice rules of global importance, this Handbook offers authoritative commentary and analysis of the international law military operations, encompassing self-defence and other possible legal bases for the use of force.

Reclaiming Justice

The International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and Local Courts

Sanja Kutnjak Ivkovich, Professor of Law, Michigan State University School of Law, and John Hagan, John D. MacArthur Professor of Sociology and Law and Senior Research Fellow, Northwestern University School of Law

In Reclaiming Justice: The International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and Local Courts, Sanja Kutnjak Ivkovich and John Hagan ask crucial questions about international justice in a systematic and comprehensive manner, looking into the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia's legality and judicial independence, as well as into specific issues of substantive and procedural justice and collective and individual responsibility. Kutnjak Ivkovich and Hagan provide an in-depth analysis of perceptions about the ICTY, the subsequent work of its local courts, and decisions reached by the local courts. They also examine the relationship between the views of the ICTY and ethnicity, a particularly relevant notion because the war was fought largely along ethnic lines.

The Legacy of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia

Edited by the late Bert Swart, Professor of International Criminal Law, Amsterdam Centre for International Law, University of Amsterdam, Alexander Zahar, Senior Lecturer in International and Criminal Law, Macquarie Law School, Australia, and Göran Sluiter, Professor of International Criminal Law, Amsterdam Centre for International Law, University of Amsterdam

The International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia (ICTY) was established in 1993 and is due to complete its trials by 2011. Easily the most credible and prodigious of the international tribunals established in this period, the ICTY is by far the most important source of case law on international criminal law. This is reflected in the citations it receives by other courts and by learned commentators. Long after its dissolution, the ICTY will most likely serve as an important frame of reference for the International Criminal Court and other courts dealing with international crimes, including national courts.

The publication of this book coincides with the year of cessation of trial activity at the ICTY. Its purpose is to mark this significant milestone in international law with a series of in-depth, critical reflections on the institution's legacy by eminent scholars and practitioners. In the course of seventeen chapters, the contributing authors analyse the main features of the ICTY's work in an unprecedented examination of the institution's legitimacy, core principles, methodologies, unstated assumptions, political circumstances, and impact—and indeed, its legacy.

NEW EDITION

The International Law of Occupation

SECOND EDITION

Eyal Benvenisti, Anny and Paul Yanowicz Professor of Human Rights, Tel Aviv University Faculty of Law

This thoroughly revised edition of the 1993 book traces the evolution of the law of occupation from its inception during the 18th century until today. It offers an assessment of the law by focusing on state practice of the various occupants and reactions thereto, and on the governing legal texts and judicial decisions. The underlying thought that informs and structures the book suggests that this body of laws has been shaped by changing conceptions about war and sovereignty, by the growing attention to human rights and the right to self-determination, as well as by changes in the balance of power among states. Because the law of occupation indirectly protects the sovereign, occupation law can be seen as the mirror-image of the law on sovereignty. Shifting perceptions on sovereign authority are therefore also bound to be reflected in the law of occupation, and vice-versa.

- New edition of a landmark book on the international law of occupation, written by one of the most respected experts on the issue

New to this edition

- Coverage of new developments since 1992; new chapters on the historical evolution of the concept of occupation, collective 'peacekeeping' or 'post-conflict' occupations, the occupation of Iraq, and on the obligation to end occupations; expanded chapters on the Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza and on the impact of developments in other areas of law, including self-determination, human rights law, democracy, and State responsibility.

The Convention on Cluster Munitions
A Commentary

Edited by Gro Nystuen, Associate Professor of International Humanitarian Law, the University of Oslo and the Norwegian Defense Staff University College, and Stuart Casey-Maslen, Senior Researcher, Geneva Academy of International Humanitarian Law and Human Rights

This Commentary on the Convention on Cluster Munitions provides a detailed assessment of the negotiation, content, and implications of the Convention, which is the latest treaty to ban a conventional weapon.

The treaty, which entered into force as binding international law on 1 August 2010, bans the production, stockpiling, transfer, and use of all cluster munitions. The book describes what cluster munitions are, when and where they have been used, and what steps States Parties will need to consider in order to implement the treaty's provisions. The Commentary goes systematically through the Convention article by article, explaining the purpose of each provision, its background and negotiation, and the meaning of each paragraph and sub-paragraph.

War by Contract

Human Rights, Humanitarian Law, and Private Contractors

Edited by Francesco Francioni, Professor of International Law and Human Rights and Co-Director of the Academy of European Law EUJ, and Natalino Ronzitti, Professor of International Law, LUISS University School of Law, Rome

- Provides a comprehensive analysis of the application of human rights and international humanitarian law to the work of private military and security companies
- Addresses questions of a highly topical nature, such as the use of private contractors in the fight against piracy, the accountability and criminal and civil liability of such contractors, and remedies available to victims

The conduct of armed conflict is increasingly being outsourced to private military and security companies, whose legal position remains unclear. This book identifies and analyses the human rights and humanitarian law framework applicable to these companies, examining how they can be held to account and how victims can obtain remedies.

Interpreting the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty

Daniel H. Joyner, Associate Professor of Law, University of Alabama School of Law

'This study is a remarkable one and is greatly welcomed at an important juncture and after a successful NPT Review Conference in 2010. Daniel H. Joyner has relied on solid grounds in interpreting the Treaty... This new study should be a required reading to anyone who would wish to deal with nonproliferation'

Individual Criminal Responsibility in International Law

Elies van Sliedregt, Professor of Criminal Law, Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam

- Features a comparative perspective, analysing the concept of individual criminal responsibility in both national and international law
- Critically analyses the current international rules regulating individual responsibility for international crimes and offers suggestions for policy improvements
- Provides useful guidance to practitioners and legal officers involved in both the domestic and international prosecution of suspected war criminals

Atrocities such as genocide or crimes against humanity are usually committed by a large number of perpetrators spread out over a considerable area. Moreover, those who masterminded the crimes may not have actively participated in them. This book sets out how these people can be held responsible for their crimes by international criminal tribunals.

International Prosecutors

Edited by Luc Reydams, Associate Professional Specialist, Department of Political Science, University of Notre Dame, Notre Dame, Stephan Parmentier, Professor of Sociology of Crime, Law and Human Rights, K.U. Leuven, Belgium, Cedric Ryngaert, Assistant Professor of International Law at the Universities of Leuven and Utrecht, and Jan Wouters, Jean Monnet Chair Ad Personam EU and Global Governance Professor of International Law and International Organizations Director, Leuven Centre for Global Governance Studies

This volume examines the prosecution as an institution and a function in a dozen international and hybrid criminal tribunals, from Nuremberg to the International Criminal Court. It is the result of a sustained collaborative effort among some twenty scholars and (former) tribunal staffers. The starting point is that the prosecution shapes a tribunal's practice and legacy more than any other organ and that a systematic examination of international prosecutors is therefore warranted.

The chapters are organized chronologically, according to the successive phases of the life of the institution and the various stages of the trials. The analysis includes each institution's establishment, mandate and jurisdiction, as well as the prosecutorial framework and strategy, the prosecutor's external relations and the completion of the institution's work. The book also considers the prosecutors' independence and impartiality, and their accountability for their decisions. The volume thus provides a comprehensive picture of the mandate, organization, and operation of the prosecution in international criminal trials.

As the first comprehensive study of an international legal actor whose decisions have widespread political repercussions, this book will be essential reading for all with an interest in international criminal justice.

Iraq and the Use of Force in International Law

Marc Weller, Professor of International Law, International and Constitutional Studies, University of Cambridge

The prohibition of the use of force is one of the most crucial elements of the international legal order. Our understanding of that rule was both advanced and challenged during the period commencing with the termination of the Iran-Iraq war and the invasion of Kuwait, and concluding with the invasion and occupation of Iraq.

Iraq and the Use of Force in International Law analyzes these developments, and their impact on the rule prohibiting force in international relations, in a comprehensive and accessible way.

Twenty Years of Crisis

The Violent Dissolution of Yugoslavia in International Law

Marc Weller, Professor of International Law, International and Constitutional Studies, University of Cambridge

The Yugoslav crisis brought armed conflict to the heart of Europe. It involved the dissolution of a state, internal armed conflict and external armed intervention, ethnic cleansing and probable genocide on a scale not seen since the Second World War. These developments created complex challenges of state recognition, peace-keeping and peace enforcement, and humanitarian intervention. This book investigates the international responses to these developments from the beginning of the crisis in 1988 to its provisional termination with the independence of Kosovo in 2008. The book critically examines the application of diplomatic and international legal tools to the dramatic events in the former Yugoslavia, and assesses the performance of the international agencies and governments involved. Moreover, it considers the impact of the episode on our understanding of the legal rules governing self-determination and secession, internal armed conflict and external intervention.

International Criminal Procedure

Christoph Safferling, Professor of International Criminal Law, Philipps-University Marburg

- Comprehensively sets out the International Criminal Court's procedural regime and contrasts it with that of other international criminal tribunals and courts, providing helpful comparative analysis
- Clearly structured according to the different stages of a criminal trial, helping practitioners and scholars find solutions for specific problems easily
- Bridges common and civil law to develop a unique procedural theory for the ICC

The procedural law applied by international criminal tribunals usually involves a mixture of common law and civil law, which is especially the case at the International Criminal Court. As a result, many procedural points remain unclear or controversial. This book sets out the ICC's procedural regime and suggests a coherent theoretical underpinning.

Terrorism

International Case Law Reporter 2009 Volume 1

Edited by Michael A. Newton, Professor, Vanderbilt University School of Law

Terrorism: International Case Law Reporter is the only print reporter of terrorism-related cases from jurisdictions worldwide. Volume One covers topics such as terrorism and national security, constitutional challenges, human rights, and civil liberties. Several cases address the interface of domestic law with international obligations in the context of armed conflict. The 2009 volume highlights the increasingly interconnected nature of terrorism as a transnational legal problem, and in particular the procedural and constitutional rights applicable to defendants who will face trial in foreign courts for crimes committed abroad.

Morality and War

Can War Be Just in the Twenty-first Century?

David Fisher, Visiting Senior Fellow, Kings College, London

'...a strikingly successful book; lucid, accessible and provocative. It is among the best works I have read on the ethics of the use of armed force.'

International Affairs

A fresh analysis of the just war tradition that addresses key contemporary security challenges, including the changing nature of war, military pre-emption and torture, the morality of the Iraq war, and humanitarian intervention.
