The screenshot shows a list of articles on the left and a preview of 'The Quarterly Journal of Economics' on the right. A callout box points to the article list, stating: 'Printer friendly format'. Another callout box points to a link in the article list, stating: 'Bibliographic links take you direct to other online resources'.

'I am delighted that Oxford Scholarship Online is making my book more widely accessible... I will encourage students to use it not just for my book, but for the others on the web site.'

JOHN HILLS, STICERD, LONDON SCHOOL OF ECONOMICS AND POLITICAL SCIENCE

A vast and rapidly-expanding online research library making Oxford's scholarly books more accessible than ever before

Cross-search the full text of over 1,200 of the very best Oxford books in Economics and Finance, Philosophy, Political Science, and Religion. At least 200 new books are added each year.

An invaluable resource for teaching and research

- All abstracts and keywords are available alongside journals' abstracts through a wide variety of online services (you can even search for books in OSO using Google)
- Link to individual books and chapters direct from your course packs and reading lists
- There is no limit on the number of students who can access a book or a chapter simultaneously, and remote access comes as standard
