

New words for new ideas

Words are added to English constantly. Words are borrowed from other languages, words are joined or 'blended' together from parts of different words, or people give their names to new words.

Use the clues, and your Oxford dictionary, to help you put the words from below into the crossword.

louche

tapas

wholefood

ballistics

aggro

actor

cityscape

hyperlink

docudrama

korma

cross-eyed

multimedia

spellchecker

gizmo

joypad

ageism

ACROSS

- To do with objects that are fired through the air.
- Using more than one medium of communication.
- A city landscape.
- A person who performs in plays and films.
- Aggressive behaviour or trouble.
- With eyes that look, or seem to look, towards the nose.
- A mild Indian meat or fish curry.

DOWN

- Dubious or disreputable.
- A computer program which checks the spelling of words in files of texts.
- Discrimination against people because of their age.
- Spanish savoury snacks served with drinks at a bar.
- A dramatized television film based on real events.
- A control device used for computer games.
- Food that has been processed as little as possible and is free of additives.
- A link from one document or part of a document to another.
- A gadget, especially one that you don't know the name of.